

Scout O'Beirne

girl power

When fifteen year-old Scout viewed a cut of Invisible Children through the film department at UAB, she saw what had been unseen, and it changed her. Stirred by the young filmmakers' vision to bring media awareness to child soldiers in Uganda, Scout became the organization's student liaison to Hoover High School. She now collaborates with them to bring film screenings to her school, getting her classmates involved with the cause. Coupled with her interest in filmmaking and editing, her ultimate goal is to study anthropology and/or medicine and move to a developing country to be "on the ground" help to those in need.

"I was really inspired by thinking maybe I could make a film one day about an issue I really care about."

Photo by Stephen DeVries